Kirriemuir, or 'Kirrie' as it is often referred to, is the gateway to the glens of Angus, where Munro baggers have 10 to tick off on their list.

Appropriately, the family estate of Sir Hugh Munro is nearby. It was, of course, Sir Hugh who is recalled by anyone working their way through the full range of mountain tops over 3000 feet.

The Angus town's winding streets and subtle red sandstone properties would have been familiar to J M Barrie, whose childhood home is now a Museum to the Peter Pan author, with the 17th Century former Town House also a Museum.

Another one-time resident, Bon Scott, lead singer with Aussie rock band ACDC is remembered fondly with a statue encouraging 'selfies' for fans drawn from all over the world.

Homebuyers, however, are more likely to be attracted by a range of modern day facilities, with Webster's High School, the secondary for 'Kirrie' and the surrounding area. The proximity to the A90 dual carriageway also makes this Angus town popular with commuters.
